BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

I marvel that ye are so soon removed from him that called you into the grace of Christ unto another gospel. Which is not another; but there be some that trouble you, and would pervert the gospel of Christ.-Galatians, i, 6. 7.

FATHER OF HIS COUNTRY

They call George Washington the Father of his Country, and as such he is remembered each year with veneration. No country can be who succeeded Lincoln. the creation of any one man. It takes the leadership of many gifted personages, and the co-operation of many followers, to do anything so tremendous as to establish a new country, much more one that has survived so many shocks and come out so powerful as has the United

But Washington more than any other one man supplied the creative impulse that made our country a nation. There were others who entertained the idea some time before Washington avowed it, that this land ought to have an independent existence. But they lacked the creative, energizing, and active force that could put through that idea

George Washington was the man who had that combination of enthusiasm, sound judgment, military skill, and power of leadership, the comet is much larger than the that could take an abstract idea like that and make it a reality. But Washington had the faith and the vision to see that | death? the idea could be brought to fruition.

When the situation looked hopeless, he had the genius to see how some military triumph could be snatched from the jaws of defeat, and give the ragged little colonial army another chance for success. When British lines disguished as a Dutch the politicians wrangled among themselves and failed to support his school teacher, to obtain some army, he somehow held it together by the force of his leadership.

A symposium of suppositions by some of the best known writers in Great Britain, appeared in London on the eve of Lincoln's birthday. no one has seen, but who is identified by his maniacal laughter at the scenes of his crimes is suspected. Inspector Brooks is first put on the trial, but his body is returned in a packing case to Sir Edric Conway, police commissioner. Young Dick Penhampton, who is in love with pretty Alison Weatherleigh, is put on the trail and at midnight discovers the body of one Thomas Herridge, a rival gangster. One of the diamonds has been placed on the dead man's chest. Dick and Detective Pollard seem to lose all clues. Dick finally asks Sir Edric to make an examination of the packing case in which Brooks' body lyzed, the discovery is made it probably comes from a lonely hill country known as the Mendips. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER 25

The famous Hardway diamonds

READ THIS FIRST:

Dick lay back in his chair and closed his eyes. Fleeting pictures of the Mendips passed through his mind; the wide stretches of uncultivated moor, Cheddar Gorge, the fish in the Blagdon Reservoir, the neglected ruins where the lead mines had once stood. Plenty of space here to commit a murder, far from any human dwellingplace. But why select a spot so far from London?

Of course, his deduction might be all wrong. He found himself wondering what the matter-of-fact Pollard would say if he told him that, from a fragment of mud found in a packing-case, he had inferred that Inspector Brooks had been murdered in the Mendips No, that would never do. Imagination was all very well, but even Conway would smile and suggest that this was carrying it too far. On the other hand, he felt con vinced that he was on the right track. In an instant his mind was made up. He would go and spy out the land himself, before he propounded his new theory at Scotland Yard.

Here he stopped the car and again consulted his map. He was still five or six miles from his destination, but this was an admirable spot from which to survey the surrounding country. The road ran along a ridge from which an extensive panorama stretched out in either direction. On the one side was the line of the Quantocks, with the loom of Exmoor on the far horizon, and Glastonbury Tor sharply defined in the foreground. On the other was an undulating country, shadowed in the distance by the smoke of Bristol.

"Oh, that's all right. I'm not particular," replied Dick easily. "If any food is wanted, I'll run you into Wells in the car. After tea, I shall have to send a wire tea, I shall have to send a wire to send a wire
